Mrs. Curtis was born in England, February 25, 1824, during the administration of President James Monroe, but came to this country with her parents ninety-one years ago, and much of her early life was spent in Boston and vicinity. In 1844 she married Charles T. Curtis of Scituate, Mass., and about 1855 came to Washington. With the exception of a few years, when she returned to her old home in Massachusetts, she resided continuously in this city and Chevy Chase, Md.

Between 1857 and 1863 her husband had charge of the construction of Cabin John bridge, as the government inspector and superintendent under Gen. M. C. Meigs. Mr. Curtis died in 1893. Mrs. Curtis was a member of the Temple Baptist Church.

Mrs. Curtis will be buried by her husband and son, Charles W. Curtis, who died in 1882. Members of the Curtis family settled in Scituate, Mass., in 1649., and in the cemetery where Mrs. Curtis is to be buried lie the bodies of many who bore the name.

hearing on the injunction proceedings brought by Admiral Seaton Schroeder against George P. Eustis and Eldridge E. Jordan, owners and Eldridge E. Jordan, owners of the Playhouse, at 1814 N street northwest, to prevent dances being held until the "wee hours."

The owners late yesterday afternoon filed answer to the rule of court requiring them to show cause why an injunction should not issue. They make sweeping denial of the charge that the Playhouse has been so conducted that it has become not only a disturber of the peace and quiet of the neighborhood, but a nuisance. They assert, and submit affidavits of adjacent property owners and residents in corroboration, that the place is orderly, is known as the home of polite diversion and is, in fact, a credit to washington.

Hore a notary by Sir Cecil Spring-Rice, the British ambassador, declaring that his household had been much annoyed by the coises connected with the conduct of entertainments at the little theater. Through Attorneys Frank J. Hogan, Daniel Thew Wright and T. Morris Wampler, the owners declare that they have endeavored to satisfy the complaints of Admiral Schroeder and of Mme. Ekengren, wife of the Swedish minister. When the latter objected to the parking of machines in front of her home, Messrs. Eustis and Jordan say they gave orders that no more automobiles should stand there. Mme. Ekengren, wife of the Complaints of Admiral Schroeder and of Mme. Ekengren, wife of the Swedish minister. the noise of the music reaching his me through windows of the building adjoining his property, the answer says, these windows were sealed, and some expense heavy draperies were hung over the walls of the second story and the use of drums was forbidden at the dances. As to the allegation that dances are run until 5 o'clock in the morning, the owners say this may have happened on one occasion during the Christmas festivities, but is by no means the usual hour for closing.

Referring to the unsworn statement of the British ambassador, which accompanied the complaint of Admiral Schroeder, the owners in their answer say they never received any complaint from the embassy and that up to the outbreak of the European war many of the members of the ambassador's official family belonged to the dancing class which gave weekly functions at the Playhouse. Several attaches of the embassy, it is stated, attended every dance at the place.

Frank P. Milburn of Milburn, Heister & Co., is making an inspection trip, which is to extend as far west as Omaha, to study plans and arrangement of various athletic club buildings before completing plans for the structure proposed for the newly organized Washington Athletic Club. Mr. Milburn has already visited Pittsburg and Cleveland, going from the latter city to Columbus. From there he is to go to Chicago and Milwarkee, then to St. Paul and Minneapolis, and from the Twin Cities to Omaha. He will return to Washington by way of Kansas City and St. Louis.

It is Mr. Milburn's expectation to incorporate in the plans for the local club's proposed building, the best features of the clubhouses in the various cities visited on his trip. Plans for the projected building, to be created on the site of the old Halls of the Ancients, in New York avenue, are to be completed as soon as possible after Mr. Milburn's return.

He went to a neighboring store to and returning, he discovered that his watch had been taken from a room in rear of the store.
